Elevation of the apostolic exarchate of Saint Ephrem of Khadki of the Syro-Malankars, India, to an eparchy, and appointment of the first eparchial bishop

The Holy Father has elevated the apostolic exarchate of Saint Ephrem of Khadki of the Syro-Malankars, India, to an eparchy, and has appointed Bishop Thomas Mar Anthonios (Valiyavilayil), O.I.C., currently apostolic exarch, as first eparchial bishop, transferring him from the titular see of Igilgili.

Bishop Thomas Mar Anthonios (Valiyavilayil), O.I.C., was born on 21 November 1955 in Adoor, in the archieparchy of Trivandrum. He is a religious belonging to the Order of the Imitation of Christ, where he made his first profession on 15 June 1974, and his perpetual profession on 9 December 1980. He was ordained a priest on 27 December 1980. He was subsequently awarded a doctorate in canon law at the Pontifical Oriental Institute. As well as English and Malayalam, he speaks Italian, German, Hindi, and Syriac, and reads Greek and Latin.

Since ordination he has held the following offices: superior of various convents; director of the boarding school at Kottayam; master of postulants; treasurer; chaplain and parish priest; professor at Saint Mary's Malankara Major Seminary of Trivandrum and in other major seminaries; counsellor general of his Institute and postulator of the cause for beatification of the Servant of God Mar Ivanios; chancellor of the major archiepiscopal Curia of the Syro-Malankara Church.

He was elected as bishop of the Curia on 25 January 2010, and was assigned the titular see of Igilgili. On 25 March 2015, His Holiness Pope Francis appointed him as first apostolic exarch of Saint Ephrem of Khadki of the Syro-Malankars.

Informative note
